

A 'behaviour problem' is any behaviour shown by an animal that the owners consider to be a problem. This means that a 'behaviour problem' can range from dogs jumping up to greet their owners, aggression directed at strangers in the park, or even behaviours which occur as a result of physical disease. These problems include inability to become housebroken, rough play, destructiveness, serious aggression, and much more. It has been estimated that over 40% of pet owners report noticeable behavioral problems in their animals-which translates, nationwide, into something like 40 million pets with behavioral problems.
